

AFLPA LAUNCHES INAUGURAL AFLW 22UNDER22

Thursday August 26, 2020

The AFL Players' Association has revealed the inaugural AFLW 22Under22 squad, presented by The Diamond Guys, featuring the competition's best young talent.

With the AFLW's youngsters fully established after four seasons, the first iteration of the 22Under22 concept for AFLW players consists of a 31-woman squad.

Young stars Ebony Marinoff, Danielle Ponter, Sophie Conway, Madison Prespakis, Chloe Molloy, Monique Conti, Sarah Allan and Isabel Huntington headline the inaugural squad.

Adelaide, 2019 AFLW premiers, are represented the most of any side, with five players featuring – Allan, Marinoff, Ponter, Anne Hatchard, and Eloise Jones – while Carlton, who lost to the Crows in the 2019 Grand Final, have the second-most with four players featuring.

To be eligible for selection, players must be aged 22 years or under for the entirety of the season, including the finals series (as was originally scheduled).

AFL Players' Association Board member, Meg Downie, said the concept is great recognition for the AFLW's young talent during the early stages of their career.

"It's exciting to see the 22Under22 concept enter the AFLW scene," Downie said.

"AFLW has opened the doors for so many talented female footballers and I've seen firsthand how much the younger brigade are influencing the competition. There are some unbelievable players from this cohort."

To coincide with the release of the inaugural AFLW 22Under22 squad, the AFLPA has also created a retrospective side compiling the best players aged 22 or under from the first three seasons of the AFLW competition (2017-2019).
